Annotation:

In this article, the role of philosophy in self-awareness, the main stages of the formation of philosophy, and the specific role of the philosophical worldview in the perception of the world are fully described.

Key words: philosophy, self-awareness, philosophical outlook, belief, individual outlook.

Introduction

Each person has his own view of the world, his own perceptions of himself and others, life and the world, and his conclusions. These concepts, concepts, views, and conclusions determine the nature of a particular person's attitude toward other people and his daily activities. (Matthew 24:14; 28:19, 20) In that sense, the worldview is considered to be a system of views, concepts, and knowledge about what surrounds a person's surroundings, the content, structure, and place of the universe.

Literature Analysis and Methodology:

It is known that the worldview is to imagine, understand, and know the universe in the most general way. The unique form of a person or a separate person is called an individual worldview. The worldview is improved at a certain time. (Matthew 24:14; 28:19, 20) In that sense, any worldview has a socio-historical nature and originates in the process of life, practical work, life, influence on nature, and hard work. The fact that a social group, society, and generation have their own worldview at every given time also shows that this concept has a historical significance.

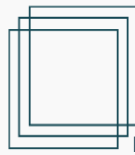

Again, the history of the world is that it develops in a certain dialectical process. Its shapes change, its historical appearance is constantly updated. The world was gradually formed in a way that was consistent with the development of society. (Matthew 24:14; 28:19, 20) In the years that followed, discoveries in the field of science demonstrate how deep the human world was and its scope of knowledge had expanded.

Results:

It is only natural for emotions, intelligence, and thinking to dominate the world's improvement. Its development also depends on people's emotional nightmares and moods, reflecting its living conditions, social status, national characteristics, cultural heritage, personal fate, age, and so on. (Matthew 24:14; 28:19, 20) Jehovah's Witnesses would be pleased to discuss these answers with you. For example, the need to

Belief arises from a person's deep belief in the accuracy of his views and opinions, the validity of his aspirations, and the uniqueness of his activities and actions to common goals and requirements. It determines a person's emotions, wills, and activities, controls them, encourages an individual to be a factor and to work effectively. Emotion and intelligence play a key role in the philosophical worldview. Emotion is an emotional and spiritual aspect of the world, and understanding the world is a mental form of the world.

Discussion:

Everyone's emotions and thoughts, knowledge and beliefs, aspirations and moods, aspirations and values will be united within the worldview and will reflect the universe as a whole. The development of a whole, holistic worldview begins at a young age and lasts until the end of a person's life. This situation represents one of the most important principles of the individual world. Knowledge plays an important role in the formation of a philosophical world.

Philosophy has long been a worldview. The reason for this is that it arises because of the need to find answers to many questions about why life is given, what is the purpose of coming into the world, and what are some ways to live a meaningful life. The philosophical world is distinguished by its theoretical foundation and careful processing. In this sense, it also acts as a general style for other fields of science or activities.

Conclusion:

Instead, it can be said that one of the most fundamental principles of the philosophical world is the unity of theory and practice. (Matthew 24:14; 28:19, 20) Jehovah's Witnesses would be pleased to support more than the worldwide work of Jehovah's Witnesses. Also, its methods and tools play a key role in the implementation of the worldview. The mentioned principles of the philosophical world define its functions. (Matthew 24:14; 28:19, 20) Jehovah's Witnesses would be pleased to discuss these answers with you.
